GAIL TITUS

After working as a ceramic artist for more than twenty years creating wall sculptures and commissioned installation work, Gail Titus has been focusing more extensively on pursuing her long time interest in abstract painting. Her detailed studies of abstract painting techniques lead Titus to develop works on canvas using acrylic paint and a variety of unconventional tools and techniques. The primary focus has been on surface development, most recently exploring textures.

Gail Titus works spontaneously and intuitively without regard to realistic forms, but with a focus of textures, colors and interesting shapes. She creates artworks by applying paint to a canvas using brushes, scrapers, water bottles or other objects, working quickly and intuitively. After this initial phase she begins to discern and work more methodically, further developing the painting. As this process continues, certain areas of the painting will start to feel undeveloped. This is when she will methodically rework those areas until the artwork gradually feels completed.

She resides in Tucson, AZ and La Jolla, CA. Her artworks have been acquired by corporations and private collectors throughout the United States, Canada and Australia.
