KATE DeLIGNE

Kate deLigne is a photographer and sculptor. She graduated from California Institute of the Arts in 2014 with a BFA in Photography and Media. DeLigne works with reflective materials to create varying perspectives in photographs, altering the fundamental makeup of a space. She is greatly influenced by the ever-changing beauty of nature in contrast with the technological world we live in.

DeLigne's minimalist photography has a sublime effect. Her Integration series explores connections between technology, nature, and the impact of humans on the environment. Malleable materials subtly interrupt the natural flow of the landscapes in her photography. A sense of tranquility and strength pervades her work.

"What we perceive is not often what is actually there" explains DeLigne. "Contemplating the sliding scale of first impressions, the deception of perception, is a motivating factor in my work. The use of malleable reflective materials in the photographs portrays the melding of technology and nature. The power of nature in contrast with the distorted reflections derived from the man-made materials is the heart of the photograph. The third factor that connects and influences technology and nature is human nature. The knowledge that technology, nature, and human nature are unpredictable and imperfect leaves me with the conclusion that when they are partnered they strengthen one another. This unity can be looked at from several different perspectives leading back to the subjective view of perception."
