

LINDSEY MCCORD

Inspired by her background in fashion, Georgia-born artist Lindsey McCord creates artworks that encapsulate the fun of being stylish and the accompanying confidence.

After a childhood on a farm, McCord moved to New York in 2010 to study fashion design. While completing her degree, McCord taught sewing, fashion design, and jewelry design to style enthusiasts in the greater New York City area. This appreciation for the details of design such as patterns, construction and styling is evident throughout her artworks.

After completing her degree in fashion design and working in the event space, McCord pushed her creativity by completing “crafty” engineering projects and creative installations for major international companies. She eventually moved to Atlanta, Georgia where she began to revisit her fashion illustration roots by making art. While her figures tend to have neutral expressions, the bold colors and patterns of her work express the joy and celebration of fashion.

Since making her artworks available in 2020, McCord continues to steadily amass a following and is collected by a growing number of collectors.
