

RF

Los Angeles artist RF fuses original and iconic characters in her vivid graffiti inspired twisted pop artworks. Within each artwork RF blends a mix of humor, eccentricity, and controlled chaos. The compositions she creates reimagine the familiar and add action to the stagnant representations of various characters.

Raised in Huntington Park and South Central, her fascination for art began at an early age by observing graffiti covered landscapes and street art culture. RF strives to push the narrative that graffiti/pop culture is far more than just “street” art.

encapsulate this art form are what makes any street alley or major city sing. Bringing that authenticity from urban cities to canvas has been an obsession of mine since I was young. I strive to make the concept of a canvas being a tight fine art box into an urban experience. Using iconic animated childhood cartoons and changing the narrative of a ‘Rated G’ perfectly animated reality into a deconstructed adult world is one way I experiment with that notion.”

“I have always believed that Pop Art and Street Art in it’s true essence is the rawest representation of the general public. The sharp yet textured lines, vivid colors, cartoon representations and bold texts that
