

TOMMY LENNARTSSON

Swedish artist Tommy Lennartsson draws on the visual culture of street and pop art when creating his original vibrant mixed-media artworks. He employs a mix of abstract and figurative elements that give nods to neo-expressionism, faux-naïf, pop, and geometric abstraction schools of art. Lennartsson builds up his canvases with charcoal, acrylic, ink and spray paint, and occasionally sews and stitches elements together to create striking scenes that ignite the viewer's imagination.

By combining materials such as found fabrics Lennartsson creates a patchwork with different elements for his expressionist canvases. The unique and playful compositions entice the viewer to use their imagination to decipher the artist's intention. Because of his intuitive style, no two works are the same and each one explores something fresh and exciting.

"The process is a spontaneous and impulsive one in which I layer materials one upon the other and occasionally stitching and sewing elements together until the piece begins to take shape. When I look at my paintings, I'm taken back to my childhood of endless doodling on my bedroom floor," the artist describes.

His work has been featured in the Spanish arts and culture magazine Lamono and was selected as the cover art for the Spring 2019 issue of New England Review.

Lennartsson has exhibited extensively in both group and solo shows and has caught the attention of collectors from across the world, including the US, Canada, Europe, Japan and China.
